ONE COPY—ONE CENT.

MISS MULLER OF HAYVILLE

Maud Muller, on a summer's day,
Plunged her rake amid the hay.

"I'm sick," she said of nothing part—
"I'm going to be a muckraker."

And so she raked the countryside,
Until her friends for mercy cried.

She merely answered them: "Oh, fudge—
Next month I'm going to rake the Judge."

She did—with pictures and with charts,
And details of his baleful arts.

She hinted at his awful past—
She had him catalogued, paged, classed.

But all this advertising brought
Unto the Judge the fame he'd sought.

He rose high in the world's affairs,
While Maud grew pale 'neath winter's care.

He wrote: "Had you, Maud, stuck to hay
The spotlight ne'er had turned my way."

And Maud is raking grass again,
The maddest of all maids of the pen.

The birthday social given by the Ladies Aid Society of the Third Street M. E. Church last evening was a great success. Nearly two hundred people were in attendance. The music was fine and every one enjoyed a pleasant evening.

EATING WITH A MILLIONAIRE.

In the March American Magazine, Hugh S. Fullerton writes an amusing, and at the same time important, article on "Eating." Following is one of his stories:

"A few days ago I accepted an invitation to lunch with the heir of one of Chicago's packers.

"Louis," he said, after examining the menu languorously. "A small portion of the clear soup and please have Adolph brush the edge of the cups with a sprig of garlic. He forgot it yesterday.

"And, Louis, a trifle of the goose liver. Please serve it on the inside leaves of the head lettuce. A salad of pimiento and grapefruit, Louis. I shall make the dressing. Please bring me my own oil and my box of chili pepper. The flavor of that which they use here is much inferior, so I import my own oil and chili," he explained to me.

"He concluded the order after some criticism and effort. He turned to me. 'I'm beastly hungry, old Top,' he remarked. 'I've really a vulgar appetite. I've gone in heavy for physical culture, you know, and I eat like a harvest hand.'

"The point of this story is I was a friend of his grandfather. I used to see him in the cattle pens at the yards at 4 a. m., jabbing his thumb into the ribs of steers, wading through mire and bidding lustily. About 7 a. m., when he had bid in enough beef for the day's kill, he walked over to Gleim's sausage factory.

"And he and Looie, the boss sausage-maker, would eat five pounds of 'red-hot' and the gravy sopped up with bread, drink a half gallon of scalding coffee and discuss the market. He lived to be seventy-two. His grandson will be thirty-five."

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Thought He Had Captured a Groundhog

TRENTON, N. J.—James Williams, a farm hand of White Horse, who is a firm believer in the ground hog weather theory, was put under the care of a physician as the consequence of his endeavor to capture the animal and keep him out of his hole, so that the six more weeks of winter would be eliminated. Williams' experience was such that he says he will never bother the ground hog again.

For several weeks Williams had boasted to friends that he had found the ground hog's hole and announced that when the proper time arrived he intended to insure the community good weather by forcing the animal to remain in the open, even if he did see his shadow.

Several volunteers to aid him in the capture, but Williams desired all the honor, and said he could perform the feat single handed. Before dawn he went to the supposed hole of the ground hog, about one and a half miles from White Horse, and waited.

It seemed a long time to dawn and the farm hand felt drowsy. He aroused himself and walked about the hole several times to keep awake, but was finally overcome, and before he knew it was sound asleep in the snow.

Williams arose with a start. The sun was brightly shining, and the snow swiftly melting about him. He gave one hurried glance into the hole and then quickly arose. Not ten feet from him he saw an animal walking leisurely in the direction of White Horse. He believed his ground hog was escaping, and immediately started in pursuit. He took the animal unaware, and the capture was easy.

Holding his prey under one arm he started for the village. When he was eeping coming down the road with his captive there was a mighty cheer from a crowd which had gathered. It was the proudest moment of Williams' life. As he walked into the crowd he held the ground hog up so all could see it and was amazed to see the crowd suddenly disperse and flee in panic.

"Drop that skunk," the town constable shouted, as he dived into a cellar. The villagers scattered in all directions.

Put "Laziest Boy in Chicago" on Diet

CHICAGO.—Three full hours before he had finished his daily thirteen hour snooze—or rather, daily-nightly snooze—Hermann Davis, 17 years old, "the laziest boy in Chicago," was rudely awakened from his snoring slumber shortly after 2 o'clock the other morning by a policeman at the home of the boy's grandmother. Hermann had not been disturbed before he had finished his sleep as far back as he could remember. He looked at the bluecoat, decided he could not be annoyed, and, rolling over, started once more to snore.

Another rough shake by the policeman brought the boy out of bed onto the floor, where he yawningly protested against such treatment and went back to sleep. Exasperated, the officer finally managed to keep the boy awake long enough to get him dressed and then took him to the Chicago avenue station, where his mother, Mrs. Ida McGraw, was pacing the office in a rage.

"There he is now!" she shouted angrily. "Look at him. He's the laziest boy in the world. I want him locked up and made to work."

Hermann looked weary of it all and answered the accusations of his parent with stretches, yawns and sleepy blinks.

"Look at this. This is what he does all day and night," and the woman thrust a piece of paper into the hands of the desk sergeant. It read:

"Rises at noon. Eats a heavy combination breakfast-lunch. Spends the afternoon at nickel theaters. Returns home to supper at six. Takes a nap until 7:30. Visits movie nickel theaters. Retires to bed promptly at 10:30."

"We'll have to turn him over to juvenile court officers," said the sergeant. "They'll put him on the 'no work, no eat' diet. He should be examined for the hook worm or the 'sleeping sickness.' I'll take charge of him."

He looked around for Hermann. The boy was fast asleep in a chair in the corner. The mother fled.

Mississippi Dog a Good Lion Hunter

NEW YORK.—To hear Paul J. Rainey tell about it, running down a full-grown lion with a pack of plain Mississippi dogs isn't half as dangerous as chasing a scared little red fox with a pack of full-blooded foxhounds—particularly if said fox takes it into his head to run over the property of an Irate Long Island farmer, armed with a shotgun full of rock salt.

"When you run a lion down with dogs you carry a gun along, and all you've got to do is to use it after the dogs drive the lion into range," he says. "But when you are chasing Reynard the only one who has a gun is the Irate farmer. So, me for the lions!"

The young American sportsman who stands sponsor for these sentiments has just returned from a year's hunting expedition in Africa. When he left here early in 1911 with his friend and companion on his famous Arctic trip, Dr. M. E. Johnson of Lexington, Ky., taking only a few guns and a pack of ordinary Mississippi hounds to go lion hunting his friends laughed at him.

Now that Mr. Rainey has the pelts of seventy-four full grown lions to wave in their faces they are eating so much humble pie that an epidemic of mental indigestion is threatened.

"The only difficulty was to train the dogs to take up the lion's scent," he said to a little group of apologetic ones who called at his offices at 527 Fifth avenue to apologize for their ill timed mirth of a year ago.

"I really don't blame you for having laughed at me last year. But I knew that the pups would back me up. I had been bear hunting with them in this country, and I felt pretty confident that dogs that would go to the mat with a savage bear wouldn't tuck their tails and run from a lion."

"They didn't take kindly to the scent at first. I didn't blame them much, for a lion doesn't feed on clover or vanilla beans. But they got used to it after a while—and at the end of six weeks all you had to do was to show them the spoor of a lion and they would locate for you in half an hour."

"Bumming" at 20 Below Not a Picnic

ST. LOUIS.—John Vall, a postoffice robber who escaped jail at Macon one night early in January in an effort to escape a 3-year term in the penitentiary, was arrested at St. Charles, Mo., where he was found hiding in a death to my iron bed, and I knew if my fingers got stiff on me I was gone. Town after town swept by and I knew I could never stand it to the Mississippi river. I had to keep my head down so the cold wind wouldn't cut my face off. I'd read about men tramping through Arctic snows, and how they suffered, but where I was roasting that night would have made Cook or Perry turn back. My eyebrows and mustache were frosted so you might have knocked 'em off with a stick.

"At last I saw far down the track a red light and when the engine whistled the light wasn't changed. That meant stop! To me it was like seeing a tall after drifting all night on a raft in the ocean. I just could get my bones limber enough to climb down."

Greenup County Sorghum 50c Gal.

Both are strictly fancy and very cheap. 1,500 bushels White Table Potatoes in my cellars and more coming. I can always furnish my trade with the best stock at lowest prices. PERFECTION FLOUR, for which I am the sole distributor in our city, has no superior anywhere. My prices are right. I pride myself on handling the best Blended Coffees sold in our city. I buy in large quantities from the importers green and have them roasted so as to have fresh roasted at all times. My 25c Coffee is better than any 30c coffee sold elsewhere. My stock of CANNED GOODS is unusually large, put up by the best packers in the country and bought in large quantities direct. I am prepared to meet any and all competition, both as to prices and quality of goods. I have in stock two hundred bushels of choice hand-picked Navy and Kidney Beans, bought in Michigan where grown when prices were at the bottom for this season. Higher prices are coming. I have coming a large stock of D. M. FERRY'S FAMOUS GARDEN and MELON SEEDS. You make no mistake when you plant these always reliable seeds. Melon growers and gardeners, take notice. A large supply of Mackerel and Codfish for the Lenten season; in fact, everything in my line that any one could want and of the very best. Fancy Creamery Butter always in stock and fresh COUNTRY EGGS. I do not handle Chicago storage eggs and never did. I am always pleased to have my friends call, which I hope they will always do.
